Nominees announced for the 30th D&AD Student Awards

Students in creative courses across Europe, Asia, North America and South Africa are celebrating their nominations for D&AD Student Awards today. This year, 125 student teams will attend the 30th Student Awards Ceremony in London on 26 June to find out who will get to walk away with a Student Yellow Pencil. The Awards identify and promote the best emerging talent within design, advertising and communications each year.

In total, 388 entries have been selected for the D&AD Student Annual, representing the best work of the year. Over 3600 student teams entered work by responding to one of 30 real world briefs, which were written and judged by the world's foremost designers, advertising creatives and business professionals.

UK students reasserted themselves this year, as Central Saint Martins College of Art & Design, Kingston University and Buckinghamshire New University won the most nominations. Design Factory International, Miami Ad School Hamburg and the Accademia di Comunicazione were among the top international schools to be recognised with nominations.

Al Young, D&AD Education Chairman, said, "D&AD's approach to education is about connecting the industry with universities and colleges and supporting the next generation of talent. Just as the creative industries today operate with a global perspective, so does D&AD. So in our 30th year it is fitting, and I'm personally thrilled, to judge work from students all over the world."

Nominated work will be showcased at D&AD New Blood (23-25 June) at Brompton Hall, Earls Court, London. All of the successful work will be published in the D&AD Student Annual, which will be published this September.
